A TRUE SPORTSMAN.

The best evidence of his devotion to the charms of the chase is the single leg on which, with the assistance of a crutch, he is compelled to drag himself about the Senate chamber. General Hampton went through the war, fighting boldly in several of the most desperate battles of the rebellion, and escaped without serious injury. A year ago General Hampton, who is very fend of riding after hounds; participated in a fox-chase near his residence in South Carolina. The horse upon which he was mounted proving a useless animal, Genesport, attempted to ride a mule. The animal kicked him in the leg severely, breaking the bones. Amputation was necessary in order to save the General's life. It is said that General Hampton is inclined to complain of the hard fate which took hood of Santa Barbara. As soon as be him safely through the war only to be maimed for life by the kick of a mule. Senator Beck, of Kentucky, is also fond

Senator Hamlin, of Maine, is fond of fishing, the Rangeley lakes being his favorite resort for sport. Senator Windom is also something of a sportsman. There are other senators fond of gun and rod, but those I have named are the only ones who may be considered devoted to field sports. Foremost among the gentlemen in the House who are sportsmen of repute is Mr. Acklib, of Louisiana. I visited him at his

It nsists of two small steel projections from the side of the standing bridge, so that the barrels, when snapped down ready for firing, fit closely on each side between these projections. The design of the invention is to prevent lateral action, as from continuous firing of one bar-which, owing to the time he is engaged in his professional and legislative duties, he had no opportunity to use. Mr. Acklin's firearms, bought from Mr. Purdy, cost him, including customs duties, over $3,500. The representative from Louisiana when he came to Congress abandoned his kennel, and gave thirteen blooded setters to his friends.

The plantations belonging to the Acklin estate are on the Bayou Teche opposite the mouth of the Red river. It is a

Before the war the sporting gentleman in Congress almost invariably came from the South. Even he was not a wing abot nor a master of the long-range rife. His kinnels were filled with fox- and deer-hounds, and his stables contained hunters which would do credit to the fields of England and Scotland. To him the deep-mouthing of his bounds was the sole music of the silent tramp behind the setter and pointer he knew little or nothing. At that time the hunter in the East never came to Congress. He was a being who was generally regarded by his money-making neighbors as a lazy ne'er-do-well, whose only redeeming traits were his boundless good nature and willingness to divide his game with his friends. The farmer usually owned a gun, but it was used as a weapon of defence against predatory animals and birds, and occasionally as the WONDERFUL COUNTRY FOR GAME BIRDS

During the past year Mr. McPherson has suffered considerably from illness consequent upon too strict attention to his duties as senator and his business in Jersey City. Getting upon the trail, they would ride after bruin and bring him to bay. While the bear was standing upon his haunches each of the four men would almost simultaneouly throw their lassos over his head, and, riding in opposite directions, strangle the animal or fasten his legs so he could not run, when he would speedily be dispatched. An unusually acute imagination is not required to perceive that if one of the four lassos ridden by the hunters were not perfectly trained, that the consequences might be ex-tremely unpleasant. Mr. Pacheco tells a number of blood-curding stories of accidents which bave happened in the pursuit of bears with the lasso .- Forest.

An Old-Time Disaster. [From the Cleveland Herald, August 21st.] Twenty-eight years ago yesterday the side-wheel lake steamer Atlantic was run into by the propeller Ogdensburg and sunk off Long Point, Canada, carrying down with her nearly 400 passengers. Both vessels plied between the leading lake ports, for last winter at the time Senators Conk-ling and Lamar had their wordy difficulty on the floor of the Senate. The insulting lan-passengers. Captain Petty, now a resident of Ashtabula, was in command of the Atlantic, and Captain Richardson commande the Ogdensburg. They were both tried seamen, and passengers in their care always rested easy. The lil-fated Atlantic left Buffalo on her semi-weekly trip to Detroit on the evening of Thursday, August 19, having on board over 300 cabin passengers and over 20 emigrants, the latter bound for points in the West. Shortly after 1 o'clock A. M. the light of an approaching vessel, the Ogdensburg, was discovered in the surrounding mist, and scarcely a moment later a terrific crash on the port side forward of the middie gangway was heard. In an instant the Atlantic commenced filling, and before the startled steerage passengers had recovered from the shock of the collision they were the tendency of the shock is to force the reis to one side. Mr. Acklin's duck- and con-gun weighs 11½ pounds. The single ach is provided with four sets of barrels, it really answers the purpose of four timet guns. The sets of barrels are 12-timet guns. The sets of barrels are 12-timet guns. The sets of barrels are 10-gauge, which the customery charge is seven to be drachms of powder. The barrels are to the drachms of powder. The barrels are the first conditions at the trap. One of barrels is full choked; on another the left barrel is full choked and right barrel is a modified-choke of on another set the left barrel is full choked and right barrel is a modified-choke of the fourth set are amooth and bell-stated muzzles. The "Express" Gouble could be regarded to suit all distances at the trap. One of barrels is full choked; on another the left barrel is full choked and right barrel is full choked and distances at the trap. One of barrels is full choked and distance, and a dangerous leak was discovered. The pumps were called into active service, and only the most strenuous efforts prevented a repetition on a smaller scale of the scenes witnessed on the Atlantic. After lying off until nearly daylight she approached the surviving passengers. A number of those who had taken to the water clung to plauks and boards, and were picked up in an exhausted condition. But little is known choked and suffocated with the rus ateerage passengers, who perished by scores without even a warning.

The rescuing vessel started for the port of Erie, Penn., and on the trip met the Sultana and the De Witt Clinton, bound for ports in the West. She turned over to them those of her passengers bound for Cleveland and Detroit, and landed at Erie those who desired to return to Buffalo. A Herald reporter yesterday conversed with a survivor of the wreck, who placed the number of lost at 262—over one half the number of people on board the vessel. Robert Smith, the chief cook of the steamer Northwest, was also on the ill-fated steamer on the night of the wreck, and estimates the number lost at fully 400, claiming that the number of emigrants aboard has always been greatly underrated. He says the number of saved did not exceed fifty or sixty. The Atlantic was partially out of water when the survivors deserted her, but sank out of sight before many hours.

RURIED FOR FORTY DAYS.

Wonderful Performances of the Indian Fakirs.

WELL-ATTESTED ACCOUNT OF A FAKIR WHO WAS SEALED UP, BURIED, AND RESUSCITATED AFTER FORTY DAYS-THE PROCESS OF RE-VIVING THE VITAL SPARK.

[From the London Telegraph.] We are not told whether the Seven Sicep-ers who retired to a cave in Ephesus during the reign of the Christian-killing Emperor Decius, and only woke up 155 years after-ward, when Theodosius II. was on the throne, made any special preparation, but probably they did not. Perhaps it was not necessary. Those were stirring times for members of the new faith, and they had litthe opportunity to grow obese. But, as a rule, to fast successfully it is said to be necessary for a man to abstain beforehand, and reduce himself most carefully to the required conditon by a long course of pre-paration. Preeminent at this art of suspending animation-for an art it becomesare the Easterns, and most wonderful stories are told of the natives of India, which, whether their powers are due to narcotics or any other process, seem to open up-if true-a wide field of medical study. One of these Indian stories, not easily accessible, probably be read with interest at the present time, and is inserted here. The author notes made of his statement, here subjoined,

PRINTED FOR PRIVATE CIRCULATION. "Runjeet Singh had heard from a Seyd or Fakir, who lived in the mountains, that the latter could allow himself to be buried when in a condition of apparent death, without really ceasing to live, seeing that he understood the art of being brought back to life on being exhumed after several months had passed. To the Maharajah this appeared to be a rank impossibility. In order, however, that he should be convinced one way or the other, he ordered the Fakir to be summoned to the Court, and caused him to undertake the singular experiment, under a threat that no means of precaution would be wanting toward the discovery of fraud. The Fakir consequently caused himself to appear in a state of apparent death. When every spark of life had seemingly vanished, he was, in the presence of the Maharajah and the nobles who surrounded him, wrapped up in the linen on which he had been sitting, and on which the seal of Runjeet Singh was placed. The body was then deposited in a chest, on which Runjeet Singh, with his own hand, fixed a heavy padlock, The chest was carried out-side the town and buried in a garden belonging to the Minister; barley was sown over the spot, a wall was erected around it, and sentinels posted. On the fortleth day, when the chest containing the Fakir was dug up and opened, the man was found

COLD AND STARK in precisely the same condition as that in ends. The delights of this heathful exercise, the grand mountain scenery, and the opportunities afforded during the chase for the use of the gun cannot be imagined by one who has not participated in the sport. question took a purgative some time before the burial display, and for several days afterward lived only on a scanty milk diet. On the day of the interment it is said that nstead of taking any nourishment, he swallowed thirty yards of a strip of linen of the breadth of three fingers, which he immediately drew up again, his object being to clean the stomach. However wonderful and perhaps laughable these operations appear to many, it is plain that these people must have a singular control over the different organs of their bodies, and more specially over their muscular contractions. When all the necessary preparations have been accomplished the Fakir closes all openings of his body with stoppers made of promatic wax, lays his tongue far back in his throat, crosses his hands on his breast, and by means of holding his breath. On his being brought back to life one of the first operations is, by means of the fingers, to draw the tongue away from the back of the throat; a warm and aromantic paste made of meal is then placed on his head, and air is blown into his lungs and into the ear-boles, from which the wax stoppers have been removed, the stoppers in the nostrils being presently forced out with an explo-sive noise. This is said to be the first sign of a return to life. He then gradually commences to breathe, opens the eyes, and recovers consciousness, continuous friction of the body being carried on all the time.

"Here is a further curious statement of opinion on the subject of the Indian stories from an equally rare source, the little pamphlet of Sir Claude Wade, published n 1837. 'I was present,' he writes, at the Court of Runjeet Singh when the Fakir, mentioned by the Hon. Captain Osborne,

BURIED ALIVE FOR SIX WEEKS,

and, although I arrived a few hours afte his actual interment, and did not, consequently, witness that part of the phenomeon, I had the testimony of Runjeet Singh himself, and others of the most credible witnesses of his Court, to the truth of the Fakir having been buried before them; and, from my baving been myself present when he was disintered, and restored to a state of perfect vitality in a position so close to him as to render any deception impossi-ble, it is my firm belief that there was no collusion in producing the extraordinary sight which I have to relate. I will briefly state what I saw, to enable others to judge of the weight due to my evidence, an whether my proof of collusion can, in their opinion, be detected. On the approach of the appointed time, according to invitation, I accompanied Rudjeet Singh to the spot whefe the Fakir bad been buried. It was in a square building, called a barra durra, in the middle of one of the gardens adjoining the Palace at Labore, with an open veranda all round, having an enclosed room in the centre. On arriving there, Runjeet Singh, who was attended on the occasion by the whole of his Court, dismounted from his elephant, asked me to join him in examining the building to satisfy himself that it was closed as he had left it. After our examination we seated ourselves in the veranda opposite the door, while some of Runject Singh's people dug away the mud wall, and one of his officers broke the seal wall, and one of his officers broke the seal and opened the padlock. When the door was thrown open nothing but a dark room was to be seen. Runjeet Singh and myself then entered it, in company with the servant of the Fakir, and a light being brought, we descended about three feet below the floor of the room lute a sort of cell, where a wooden box about four feet long by three feet broad, with a sloping roof, contained the Fakir, the door of which had also a padlock and seal similar to that on the outside. On opening it we saw a figure enclosed in a bag of white linen, of the death-struggle of the unfortunate fastened by a string over the head,

I fastened by a string over the head, on the exposure of which a grand salute was fired, and the surrounding multitude came crowding to the door to see the spectacle. After they had gratified their curiosity, the Fakir's servant, putting his arms into the box, took the figure out, and closing the door placed it with its back against it, exactly as the Fakir had been squatting (tike a Hindo idol) in the box itself. Runjeet Singh, and myself descended into the cell, which was so small we were only able to sit on the ground in front of the body, and so close to it as to touch it with our hands and knees. The servant then began hands and knees. The servant then began POURING WARM WATER OVER THE FIGURE.

but as my object was to see if any fraudu-leut practices could be detected, I proposed to Runjeet Singh to tear open the bag and have a perfect view of the body before any means of resuscitation were employed. I accordingly did so, and may here remark that the bag when first seen by us looked mildewed, as if it bad been buried some time. The legs and arms of the body were strivelled and stiff, the face full, the head reclined on the shoulder like that of a corpse. I then called to the medical gentleman who was attending me to come down and inspect the body; which he did, but could discover no pulsation in the heart, the temples, or the arms. There was, however, a heat about the region of the brain which no other part exhibited. The servant then commenced bathing him with hot water, and gradually relaxing his arms and legs from the rigid state in which they were contracted, Runjeet Singh taking his right and I his left leg, to aid by friction in restoring them to their proper action, during which time the servant placed a hot wheaten cake about an inch thick on the top of the head a process which he twice or thrice repeated. He then pulled out of his nostrils and ears the wax and cotton with which they had been stopped, and after great exertion opened his mouth by inserting the point of a knife between his teeth, and while holding his jaw open with his left hand drew the tongue forward with his right, in the course of which the tongue flew back seve ral times to its curved position upward, in which it had or:ginally been, so as to close the gullet. He then RUBBED HIS EYES with ghee (or clarified butter) for some seconds, till he succeeded in opening them, but of considerable interest on account of when the eyes appeared quite motionless the known veracity of the witnesses, will and glazed. After the cake had been applied for the third time to the top of the head the body was violently convulsed, the nosof it was one Hon. Captain Osborn, and the trils became inflated, when respiration ensued, and the limbs began to assume a nattural fulness; but the pulsation was still faintly perceptible. The servant then put some of the ghee on his tongue and made him swallow it. A few minutes afterward the eye-baths became dilated, and recovered their natural color when the Fabiana their natural color, when the Fakir re-cognized Runjeet Singh sitting close to him, and articulated in a low sepulchral tone, scarcely audible, 'Do you believe me now?' Runjeet Singh replied in the a-firmative, and invested the Fakir with a pearl necklace and a superb pair of gold bracelets, and pieces of silk and muslin, and shawls, forming what is called a khelat, such as is usually conferred by the Princes of India on persons of distinction. I share entirely in the apparent incredibility of the fact of a man being buried alive and surviving the trial without food or drink for various periods of duration; but, however incompatible with our knowledge of physilogy, in the absence of any visible proof to the contrary, I am bound to declare my belief in the facts which I have represented, however impossible their existence may ap-pear to others."

OFFICE in the yard, six good OUT-HOUSES in good repair, with brick chimneys; two large BARNS, and one new STABLE; one new STOREHOUSE now doing a good business. A hold stream of excellent spring water rises upon and runs through the farm.
There is at present more than enough first-growth PINE TIMBER to supply the premises, and a quantity of young timber which with in a few years, be large enough for cord wood.
Persons destring to inspect the premises can reach them easily by the steamer Ariel from Riehmond, Norfolk, or any river landing.

TERMS OF SALE: Cash, $2.000; the balance in easy payments to sait pur-hases. Possession can be
